THE STATE ALLIANCE—A WISE ADDRESS.

We publish elsewhere in to-day's CHRONICLE the full text of the address of Mr. ELIAS CARR, President of the State Alliance, delivered yesterday at Asheville, and commend it to a careful perusal of all our readers. It is eminent conservative and wise, and will be read with interest throughout the State.

Coming from the head of an organization which to-day yields greater influence in the State than any secret organization ever wielded, the utterances are to be accepted as the expression, not only of an educated and thoughtful citizen like Mr. CARR, but as the expression of the great army known as the North Carolina Farmers' Alliance.

The review of the truly wonderful growth of the Alliance must be gratifying to every member and well-wisher of that organization. With the more thoughtful fact of this growth will bring serious thought of the responsibilities which great strength and wide influence carries with it. The order is very large and is composed of the sturdy and honorable tillers of the soil whose betterment and prosperity are the objects of their union. In every just and wise measure, advocated to secure to the agriculturists every right that ought to be theirs, and to bring about relief from the oppressive class legislation, which is a sore burden to them and to all who live in North Carolina and other agricultural communities, the Alliance will have the earnest and hearty co-operation and good-will of thousands of the patriotic citizens in the State who are ineligible to membership. The large membership and great influence of the Alliance must make all its wise leaders pause and reflect before taking any important step. A false step now might produce results that would injure the whole State, and the responsibility resting upon this meeting of the State Alliance and upon its officers is of so grave a nature that they must of necessity hesitate long before taking action upon any important measures.

Power brings responsibility, and the responsibility resting upon the State Alliance now is so great that it will require all the wisdom, all the patriotism, all the unselfishness, and all the devotion to principle that can be commanded to wield that power so that it may prove of value to the State. Unwise, hasty, or impetuous action would not only bring injury to the Alliance but to every interest in the State.

The Alliance is young yet. It has grown wonderfully. Its position is yet to be made. Its power to right wrongs and to bear present ills rather than fly to worse ills are yet to be shown. The present is the time of its gathering—the time of its revival. Great numbers are joining, and many of them do not understand the ultimate aims and purposes of the order. Some of them think that every change desired ought to be made at once even at the risk of jeopardizing honest government in the State, and of losing the opportunity to do great things by conserving their strength. There are doubtless those in the order who are actuated by selfish purposes—men who have joined in order to gain something, either in money or office or power, for themselves. Selfish and insincere men crowd into every good organization, and seek to make themselves heard by taking extreme and radical positions. They are led to this because they love their own private gain more than they love the principles for which they pretend to be contending. They would precipitate the Alliance into any foolish or hasty course if thereby they could feather their own nests.

It may be that more than one man has joined the Alliance with the same spirit of the man CAPT. ALEXANDER tells about. He joined at one meeting, and at the next meeting he came with a big empty bag. Upon being asked why he brought the bag, he said that he brought it to get his "share." He thought that the Alliance was going to divide out property or supplies, and he had joined for no higher purpose than "to get his share." For such men—whether they desire to carry their "share" in a bag or take it in the shape of position, gained at the sacrifice of the true interests of the Alliance—the host of patriotic members of the Alliance have a profound contempt.

Four years ago, when the Alliance was in its infancy, no such danger existed. It was then few in numbers and its influence was scarcely felt. With great power comes this danger—the greatest danger that now confronts the Alliance. It is the part of wisdom to recognize this danger and take steps to prevent its working serious injury. It will require nerve and patriotism of a high order to say to these self-seekers: "Stand aside. The Alliance was not organized to give such as you place or power. We need cool and brave and wise men at the helm—men who prefer the advancement of the principles of the Alliance to their own gain." But this must be said, and repeated to these self-seekers, and it must be thundered through the ranks so loudly that the Dugald Dalgettys in the order will be made to hear and heed it.

The future success and achievements of the Alliance depend absolutely upon whether the self-seekers can be relegated to the rear and the patriotic and wise men elevated to leadership. The success of the Alliance in its short history has been largely due to the conservatism and wisdom of its officers, and the fact that efforts to make it a political machine have been defeated. Whenever the Alliance has gone into politics it has been shorn of power and usefulness. The full growth has not been fully attained, but approximately so. The future work will be far more difficult. It is easier to build up a great organization, to equip it, and to drill it than to keep it in tact and in splendid condition in the face of steady, everyday work. Principles are to be inculcated, information to be disseminated, false views corrected, great questions debated and differences to be settled. These things require a devotion unknown to the day of agitation, and, for the successful exercise of these duties, men must be made of sterner stuff than is requisite while the revival is in progress. The wise members of the Alliance understand this, and they will do what they can to prevent hasty action, and to inculcate just views.

The deep interest taken by farmers in questions that affect every tax-payer will result in a better citizenship. When every citizen is informed upon financial questions, there will come reform. The financial legislation of the past twenty-five years has been dictated by the same men who have enacted the tariff legislation. It has all been in the interest of the classes against the masses. Through the tariff, the consumer is robbed, and through contraction of the currency his debts are increased, and his property depreciated. Mr. CARR draws a sad picture—all too true—of the result of this legislation. Not addressing a partisan assembly, Mr. CARR does not say that ALL LEGISLATION COMPLAINING OF WAS ENACTED BY THE REPUBLICANS, but he says the same thing more strongly when he says—and says most truly—

This government for the last thirty years has been run in the interest of a vicious war party. The war feeling has predominated in every national election. The men who did the fighting have no voice in the government. Who are the men in power to-day? Those that were enriched by the war and its consequent legislation. The ill-gotten millions of these legislators has been the power behind the throne. The evidence of this is found in the history of the laws, the history of the bonds, the history of the demonization of silver. But a stronger evidence yet is the present condition of the working classes, who, as a rule the world over, are patient and peaceable.

This idea runs through the whole address, and is a severer arraignment of the Republican party than if he had said: "Thou art the man." It is severer because it is non-partisan.

Many will not agree with Mr. CARR in the relative importance he attaches to the reform of the "iniquitous protective tariff" and the need for a larger circulating medium. He has, probably, not given the proper relative importance, but reform along both lines is so imperatively needed that it matters little which is insisted upon most, provided both are regarded as twin-evils of the same parent. The same selfish class which rob us through tariff oppress us through contraction, and though the CHRONICLE might change the relative importance of them, we have no quarrel with PRESIDENT CARR because he regards contraction as the greatest. Certainly it has been a fruitful cause of poverty and has made it impossible for honest men to meet their obligations. Not only has this financial legislation been ruinous to all agricultural countries, made the rich richer and the poor poorer, but it was conceived in iniquity, brought forth in fraud, and reared in rascality—as witness the demonization of silver by one of the most infamous pieces of trickery known to legislation. All the ills which have come to us through legislation have come through class legislation—through legislation enacted to "protect" somebody who usually didn't need protection. We are glad that Mr. CARR has called attention to this vicious legislation. All class legislation is wrong because it has for its object the robbery of one class to benefit another. It is not in accordance with the spirit of our government, and all patriots ought to seek to forever blot out every species of class legislation that disgraces our statute books.

But the best part of the really excellent address is that in which Mr. CARR shows that the real solution of all questions is for "THE STATE TO EDUCATE THE MASSES AND TEACH THEM HOW TO THINK FOR THEMSELVES." He gives facts and figures in regard to our public school system, which are not creditable to us as a people, and heartily recommends the Alliance to lend its "aid and encouragement" to securing better public schools. This recommendation of the President will doubtless be acted upon by the Alliance, and it will set a ball in motion that will open the avenues of learning to every poor boy and girl in North Carolina. PRESIDENT CARR: In the name of the poor, honest and manly young boys in the State, and the pure and sweet little girls, who will grow into wise men and women, if they are given the advantages of an education, the CHRONICLE thanks you for your wise recommendation. Seventeen out of eighteen of the white children of North Carolina depend entirely upon the public schools for their education; and this being so, the Alliance must of necessity seek to secure better facilities for so large a proportion of its membership, as well as for the education of all others who cannot enjoy the advantages of education unless the State furnishes good public schools. We trust that the Alliance will heartily aid in giving the State a better system of public schools.

The CHRONICLE hopes that wisdom will crown the deliberations of this session of the Alliance. We hope and believe that the delegates in attendance will be progressively conservative, will inaugurate such measures as will redound to the welfare of all the members of the order, and of all the people in the State as well.

CARPETS.

This one item, and it's a big one with us, should be considered by every one intending to buy any kind of floor covering.

We are in better shape than ever, for this season of the year, to show carpets, as we have been buying liberally, and almost every freight brings something new.

The demand for carpets has been unusually heavy for this month, and that, with some alterations that we have been making, has kept this department in some disorder, but now we are about straight, and can show carpets with all our accustomed conveniences.

As to prices, all we will say is that during August you can get prices that you can't get after Sept. 1st.

As to the quality of stock we carry, you haven't an idea, until you come and see; and in the medium grades, we really have for you some of the choicest patterns, and at prices that the same goods have not been offered at in the city.

Will cheerfully submit samples to our out-of-town patrons.

The Kabo corset that brings a woman to perfect form if she only laces it tight enough—for it never stretches or breaks its "bones" or rolls up—has soft eyelets that do not cut the laces.

Soft eyelets are loops of corset lace instead of metal eyelets.

If the Kabo corset fails in a year in any part but the steels—no way has yet been invented to make unbreakable steels—you get your money back from the store where you bought it.

You wear the Kabo corset two or three weeks; and, if not satisfactory, take it back and get your money again.

Notice of the Incorporation of Raleigh Paper Co.

NORTH CAROLINA. Before Clerk
WAKE COUNTY. Superior Court.

Notice is hereby given that I have this day issued letters declaring John A. Brewer, J. N. Holding, H. G. Holding and C. E. Brewer, their associates and successors, a corporation under the name and style of Raleigh Paper Company, for the purposes set forth in the articles of agreement and plan of incorporation which have been filed and recorded in this office, with all the privileges and powers under chapter 16 of the Code of North Carolina, and the laws amendatory thereof.

The main business proposed to be done by the corporation is the making and selling of news paper, wrapping paper, and all other kinds of paper usually made out of cotton and linen rags, wood pulp, old paper and all other kinds of material generally used in connection therewith; and the buying and selling of all kinds of rags, old paper, wood pulp, and all other articles, chemicals, &c., of any and every nature needed to effectuate the aforesaid business of the company. The corporation proposes to do the following business: secondary to the main business, in order to utilize the machinery and water power owned by the company, and to all the company in doing its main business, to wit: the buying of wood, and the making and selling of wood pulp; the buying, sawing and selling of cotton; the grinding of corn and wheat into meal and flour; the buying, selling and trading of goods, wares, merchandise, farm and household supplies of every kind; the buying and selling of all kinds of property and material, and the doing of all things necessary to carry out and properly conduct the aforesaid business of said corporation.

The place of business of said corporation is mainly at the Falls of Neuse River, Wake county, N. C., but said corporation will have an office and receive its mail in the city of Raleigh, said county of Wake. The capital stock of said corporation is forty thousand dollars, divided into four hundred shares of one hundred dollars each, with privilege to increase the capital stock to three hundred thousand dollars.

None of the stockholders of said corporation are individually or personally liable for any debt, contract, liability or omission of or for said corporation.
